Aww, Shucks

By Thadeus Greenson and Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

editor@northcoastjournal.com

This week the Journal took home a total of seven awards at the California Newspaper Publisher's Association's Better Newspaper Contest, a peer-judged competition which includes some 800 newspapers throughout the state. Competing against similarly sized weeklies, we fared well, garnering awards that reinforce our mission, which is to take the best in-depth, long-form reporting we can muster, package it with dynamic graphic design, comprehensive event listings and fun, thoughtful features, all with the goal of helping our readers better understand, enjoy and grow our community.

Here are the categories and individual honorees:

1st Place Arts and Entertainment Coverage

2nd Place Lifestyle Coverage

Director Holly Harvey, for her cover image for the Dec. 3, 2015 story "Putting Heads Together")

1st Place Non-profile Feature Story (News Editor Thadeus Greenson, for his Oct. 15, 2015 cover story "System Failure")

2nd Place Non-profile Feature Story (Assistant Editor Grant Scott-Goforth, for his Dec. 3, 2015 cover story "Putting Heads Together")

1st Place Investigative Reporting (Staff Writer Linda Stansberry, for her July 9, 2015 cover story "The Shut Out")

2nd Place Investigative Reporting (Assistant Editor Grant Scott-Goforth, for his Aug. 20, 2015 cover story "Free and Afraid")

While the recognition from our peers in the industry is wonderful, truth be told, we were already damn proud of this work and the staff and freelancers who produced it.

On the news side of things, these weren't stories we broke, but stories we took on and explored, finding layers of depth, context and nuance, to which you, our readers — in conversations in our letters pages, around dinner tables and in coffee shops — added your own experience and perspective.

On the graphic side, Holly Harvey's powerful cover illustration made a subject as scientifically nebulous as concussions seem tangible. On the arts, entertainment and lifestyle side, we are proud to consistently deliver interesting and engaging features and comprehensive events listings to help Humbolters better enjoy the arts, culture, music and good times with which our county runneth over.

These awards were given for the editorial work of this paper — its stories, content and design — but we are keenly aware that they represent the hard work of a building full of people, from the advertising representatives who keep the lights on around here to our office staff who make sure the bills actually get paid to the production folks who make our paper pretty and the drivers who make sure that paper gets where it needs to be, which is in your hands. And, we'd be remiss if we didn't end by thanking you, our readers, for joining and furthering the conversation. Thank you. ●

Marsh Repercussions

Editor:

The PalCo Marsh has been cleared of the roughly 150 people camping there ("Clearing the Marsh," May 5). While 40 new beds were made available by private individuals in the converted shipping containers, those are only for 90 days at a time. That means that up to 110 people are now out looking for new place to sleep. Look for some of them to end up in an alley, gulch or doorway near you.

Affordable Homeless Housing Alternatives (www.AHHA-humco.org) is the only non-governmental organization offering an ongoing solution by way of a sanctuary camp and eventual transition to a Tiny House Village. I urge you to join me in supporting AHHA and encouraging the Eureka City Council and the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors to work with them in a productive manner.

Bigfoot, Narrow Mind

Editor:

I was perplexed by the article "Crackpot" (April 28). While Dr. Stepp's keen interest in Bigfoot is interesting, I was amazed he was allowed a weekly forum by different HSU departments.

I've have never seen Bigfoot, nor has anyone I know. But I don't dismiss the possibility he exists. What I have and do see on a regular basis is "chemtrails," the laymen's term for SRM (solar radiation management), and many people I know and communicate with from around the world see them as well.

I've taken half a dozen rain tests, lab reports aluminum and barium; my hair tested, elevated aluminum and barium. The notion that these aircraft trails are contrails — ice crystals — is absolutely ludicrous. Research it yourself.

So why would a meteorologist of Dr. Stepp's stature come across as so close-minded toward the chemtrail phenomena? Perhaps his earlier statement explains why: "A subject that will not get funded and will endanger your career, may never get studied." ...Or worse!

How can we trust science, if the scientists are afraid to speak out?

I for one, do my own research. A good place to start is www.geoengineeringwatch.org. Or you may enjoy an article from a few days ago by Chuck Norris, martial arts expert and actor: "Sky Criminals" at www.WND.com.

For the Trees

Editor:

The forests of the Mattole River's largest tributaries, the North Forks, have many lovers; a remote, wild beauty, a long history as prodigious fish habitat, and more recently as a war zone during the MAXXAM era, have given them great charisma. These forests are now mostly owned by Humboldt Redwood Company, and recently two HRC

Panegyric: The Pencil

I hop across the paper on my pointed head, skipping with my heartbeat's soul of lead.
I'm a somewhat slender fellow, rounded body shining yellow ...
built to fit two-fingers' thumb, tattoo
like, Tattooer number "1"

Then, when travels tend to wear me down, exquisitely, in certainty, I sway my top while inserting me into that spinning slot to sharpen my lead crown.

And, even though I'm a humble "one",
I have to admit I'm pretty hip-
I come equipped quite fit:
While episodes of errors are emphatically unacceptable, the totality of my ability in my duality of purpose as scribe and literary guide to detect defect, and casually, craftily correct, is irrefutably respectable!
It's me ! I'm error free !

Just a flip between my skip-
Erased with grace without a trace-Unsightly blight now gone from sight, and, much to my delight I write on right ...

The fate of oaks, as described in the NCJ article "March of the Conifers" (April 28) was the subject of much agitated discussion. We saw tanoak, a beech with oak characteristics. HRC regards them as weeds. The visitors, challenging this disrespect, argued that tanoaks support the entire web of life of the forest. An average mature tanoak produces 200 pounds of nuts every other year. Old-growth trees can produce 1,000 pounds. Insects boring into the nuts provide bird food. Mammals, like woodrats, bears, deer and pigs, eat the nuts. Then spotted owls, goshawks, wildcats, coyotes eat them.

Tanoak is more fire-resistant than Douglas fir. Tall ones condense fog, adding to the water table. Fallen leaves and nuts enrich the soil. Deep roots stabilize steep hillsides in torrentially rainy places like the Mattole. HRC, however, wants them suppressed to less than 15 percent on their lands. Though leaving some big ones, they will not recruit more. Worse, the company plans to poison the tanoaks with Imazepyr, an herbicide which has a long half-life and high mobility potential.

Our HRC escorts heard us out courteously. But corporate forestry management is market-driven and legislation cannot sidestep this contradiction, stop the march of the conifers or bequeath to our grandchildren the healthy forests, fish runs and clear waters we inherited from our parents.

Vote!

Editor:

Estelle Fennell should definitely be re-elected to the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors.

There's no question about it: Democrat Estelle Fennell is a dedicated public servant who deserves our support. Estelle is compassionate, intelligent, serious and committed to working with and working for all members of our community.

I wish I could say the same about her opponent Bud Rogers, but Rogers is not a serious candidate. Rogers has relatively few relevant ideas, most of which are either unrealistic and/or undesirable.

For instance, Bud Rogers wants county residents to agree to pay higher taxes for the purpose of creating a county bank, which is entirely unnecessary.

Furthermore, Rogers hosts a local radio show which is solely devoted to promulgating his personal convoluted conspiracy theory.

Rogers alleges the federal government purposefully caused the multi-year California drought by the means of nefarious aerial spraying. We really want someone is paranoid and delusional as Bud Rogers representing the people of Humboldt County? Do your community a favor — vote for Estelle Fennell. She's the best person for the job.

Jake Pickering, Eureka

Correction

A story in the May 5, 2016 edition of the Journal headlined "Adequate Shelter?" contained inaccurate information regarding the Eureka Rescue Mission. Bryan Hall, the mission's executive director, tells the Journal that people who don't want to sit through religious sermons at the mission can opt out of them and still receive shelter and other services. The Journal regrets the error.

Write an Election Letter!

The Journal will publish letters related to local elections through June 2, meaning you have until Monday, May 30 at noon to get your opinion on the supervisor races, or any other local elections, in print. Election letters must be no longer than 150 words — and we'll only run one per writer per week. We'll fit as many as we can into the print edition and run others online. Get writin'! (Letters responding to the Journal's non-election coverage are, as always, welcome and encouraged, and can run as long as 300 words.) ●

We're celebrating Health Care Week!

Thank you, employees, physicians and volunteers.

Each day employees, physicians, and volunteers at St. Joseph and Redwood Memorial Hospitals bring skill, medicine, innovation and compassion together in a seamless gesture from the heart. They work tirelessly to help us all enjoy a healthier life, for the everyday moments as well as the once-in-a-lifetime.

During Health Care Week and every day of the year, we thank you for your tenderness, inspiration & dedication.

A Court of Their Peers

By Linda Stansberry
linda@northcoastjournal.com

The judge is chewing gum. Her hair is piled in a messy bun on top of her head, where a pair of sunglasses also rests. She giggles shyly as she walks up to the podium and adjusts the microphone. Teen Court is now in session.

A national diversion program, Teen Court is operated locally through the Boys and Girls Club of the Redwoods. The crime is real, the court is real and the sentence is real, although the emphasis is on rehabilitation rather than punishment. The goal is to steer young offenders away from probation, juvenile hall and future infractions. Every position in court — the judge, clerk, attorneys and jurors, is filled by a teenager. The process can be as transformational for the teen volunteers as it is for the defendants.

Madeline Scott, a junior at North Coast Preparatory Academy, served as the defendant's attorney in the case we witnessed. A tall, poised young woman with a long mane of blonde hair, she has both learned about restorative justice and improved her public speaking skills in her three years volunteering with Teen Court. This was her second time serving as a client attorney. (Rather than "defense" and "prosecution" Teen Court has "client" and "community" attorneys.) Before entering the courtroom, she did some legwork.

"I called the defendant and asked questions. It's difficult because they don't always want to answer the questions you have," she says.

Normally juvenile cases are off-limits to the public, and for privacy reasons, we agreed not to disclose information about the defendant or the circumstances of his offense. Rest assured, though, it was pretty average teenage stuff: the usual combination of bad friends and bad choices. Scott says teenagers are better equipped than most to understand how someone their age can end up on the wrong side of the law.

"A lot of cases involve marijuana. I really feel when it happens, teens can relate," Scott says. "Because a lot of our economy runs on the pot industry, it definitely affects the children. It's more normal and accepted here."

Eureka Police Capt. Brian Stephens, who serves as the department's Teen Court liaison, agrees.

"When I look at it and where my kids are growing up, I think it's very challenging," he says. "I watch the challenges they face and I think it's scary."

The majority of referrals for Teen Court come from local high schools, but some also come in from the juvenile probation department and law enforcement agencies. According to Stephens, the type of crimes that qualify a youth for restorative justice are usually those that an adult wouldn't be cited for, like smoking pot during recess. The juvenile must admit his or her guilt and voluntarily participate in and accept whatever sentence is handed down. Over the last three years, a total of 61 cases went to Teen Court (the organization can handle much more, up to 60 a year). Only about 6 percent of juveniles referred to the program reoffended or failed to finish their sentences, according to Teen Court Director Sacha Marini. When EPD's memorandum with the program was renewed in March of this year, Marini and Stephens reviewed past cases to see if there were more instances in which the restorative practice could be used.

"With Teen Court, we can get people as they begin that path towards delinquency and connect them with a positive peer group. I think it's a great program," Stephens says. "Over the years there's a lot of cases I wish had gone through there."

Back in court, the cross-examination has begun. The attorneys ask the defendant about his grades, family role models, peer group and goals. The community attorney's notes are written in a school notebook, opposite a page of doodles. A family member is called up and questioned with the help of a volunteer interpreter from the Boys and Girls Club. All of the teen leaders are shadowed by their adult mentors, two attorneys and a judge, respectively. The mentors, who also volunteer their time, are on hand to give direction or answer questions.

Ryan Hurley, a local estate and probate lawyer who mentored the community attorney, says he is continually impressed with the teens.

"Each time I set my expectations a little bit higher, and each time they blow it away," he says. "These kids' eyes are open really wide at a young age. Having participated in a few hearings now, these kids are having to confront substance abuse and drug transactions, not in a casual setting, but in a real nuts and bolts courtroom setting."

As the judge picks her nails, the attorneys explore the defendant's failing grades. What would make the difference? Tutoring? Mentoring? Does the defendant have a place to do homework?

After the information is presented and the jury leaves the room to deliberate, Humboldt Superior Court Judge Christopher Wilson, under whose tenure the program was reinstated (it was on hiatus before 2001, when the Boys and Girls Club helped restart it) uses the time to chat with the teenagers. He tells the defendant, "Your mom wants you to make good decisions. In Teen Court you get a chance."

Bill Damiano, chief probation officer for the county, says Wilson has been a consistent supporter of the Teen Court program and that he often prods the probation department to refer more cases. Damiano believes in the probation system, but he'd also like to see fewer children end up in it. Low-level offenders are often referred to mental health providers and other resources, as well as the Teen Court program.

"Back in the old days, we used to bring everybody into probation. It made them twice as likely to stay in the system," he says. "If we can send them off to Teen Court or some other probation because they're low-risk, we actually reduce their likelihood to return."

When the jury returns to the box, the judge, reading off a script, asks if they have reached a decision. They have, says the foreperson. The defendant is remanded to tutoring, told to meet with a guidance counselor and join a club. They also must serve on a Teen Court jury in the future, which is a mandatory minimum sentence in all cases.

After the sentencing, Wilson queries and jokes with the jurors, many of whom are former defendants. He asks if they felt like the defense and community attorneys did a good job, if the interpreter was useful, and shares his many years of courtroom experience. Many of the teenage jurors are shy, mumbling their answers, with the exception of the extroverted boy who read the verdict.

"Was jury duty hard?" asks Wilson.

"It was easier than sitting there," replies the boy, pointing to the defendant's chair. His peers laugh.

Once court adjourns, the teenagers begin turning on their phones and talking to one another. A group of girls from McKinleyville cluster together, waiting for their ride home.

One of them served as a juror after her own Teen Court experience. She says she believed what the defendant got was fair, and that her experience with the program was largely positive as well.

"The tutoring helped a lot," she said, adding that she was getting ready to go into high school after being held back. "It's hard. I've seen a lot of drug use. But I'm not coming back. I've got a life goal."

Mold School

Klamath-Trinity's massive campus mold cleanup

By Grant Scott-Goforth

grant@northcoastjournal.com

A mold epidemic has struck schools from Hoopa to Pecwan, shuttering classrooms and cafeterias, shuffling kids into less-than-ideal temporary rooms, prompting impromptu days off and sparking a multi-million-dollar repair project.

Jon Ray, the superintendent of the Klamath Trinity Joint Unified School District, which oversees eight schools spread over 1,000 square miles, including Hoopa high school and elementary, and others in the Klamath and Trinity river region, said he thinks the mold problems may have been serious enough to affect the district's attendance rates.

Children and people with respiratory disease are especially susceptible to mold, which can cause a host of symptoms like congestion and fatigue.

The district closed all of its schools for five days in February, having discovered widespread mold. For that and the following week — which was a regularly scheduled vacation week — teachers and staff scrambled to rearrange campuses. Sixteen classrooms were closed in total, as well as cafeterias and kitchens in four schools, and libraries and administrative offices.

Seventh and eighth graders at Hoopa Valley Elementary were moved into rooms at Hoopa Valley High School; students at a community day school were moved to another facility; libraries, computer labs, conference rooms and other facilities were adapted to make room for students. Since the closure, two schools have been feeding students out of a rented portable trailer.

"It is by no means optimal," Ray said.

But the district hasn't just relocated the students, 90 percent of whom are Native American and qualify for the district's free lunch program. Last month the State Allocation Board — with guidance from North Coast Sen. Mike McGuire — gave the school district nearly $10 million, which the district has already awarded in abatement contracts. Demolition of the mold-damaged properties has begun.

Contracts to repair — or rebuild, as needed — are being solidified this month.

The district's mold problem dates back to the poor design of its buildings — mostly built in the 1950s and 1960s — for the humid North Coast climate, Ray said. Insulation and other materials absorb water from leaks, which cause the mold to proliferate. As it spreads, it can damage the structural integrity of load-bearing beams and studs.

Ray said the cafeterias are expected to re-open by Aug. 31 — two days into the school year. The other construction under the "aggressive building plan" is scheduled to finish in November, though Ray concedes it could take longer, depending on what structural damage is discovered as crews peel off moldy drywall. The repairs also include Americans with Disabilities Act upgrades, like widened doorways, and plumbing and electrical reroutes could delay those improvements, he said.

Construction on the KTJUSD's facilities is pricey as well. Specialists, workers and materials have to come from the Redding or Eureka areas, increasing the costs to the district by 35 to 40 percent, Ray said.

While the district is deep in the throes of repairs now, it's not a new problem. Mold can grow quickly, but the scale of the problem at KTJUSD schools shows it's been growing for years. "That doesn't happen overnight," Ray said. "Unfortunately, I think people in Humboldt County are kind of used to mold or real moisture-ridden rooms."

In fact, the recent round of repairs is part of what Ray called "Phase Two." The district first began addressing mold problems in April of 2014, closing classrooms and Hoopa Valley High's gymnasium, which is scheduled to re-open this summer.

The district funded the first phase of repairs with $15.7 million from two certificates of participation — essentially mortgages issued on the district's properties, which the district pays back to the lenders. Ray said those protect against repossession to a certain degree — if the district defaults, the lenders could take ownership of the property but would have to continue to rent it to the district.

Mold eats away load-bearing studs, creating structural problems.

Submitted.

The money recently granted by the State Allocation Board was intended to be reimbursement for the first phase of the mold abatement project, but Ray said those funds will now be put toward phase two. The district will apply again for reimbursement, and has put a bond measure seeking $6.5 million on the June ballot. Those bonds can't be larger, Ray said, because 75 percent of the school district's lands are tribal — which means they can't tax the properties on them.

The district will also seek federal grant money that helps districts on untaxable lands, but there's little in that pot to go around, Ray said.

The district has also applied for a waiver for the five days of instruction students missed in February, which Ray says he's confident it will receive. Because the district paid faculty and staff while no students were present — moving the classrooms was an all-hands-on-deck situation — it would have to find funds to pay them if the missed instruction days were added on to the end of the school year.

In the end, the repairs and construction should make KTJUSD's facilities safer and more comfortable for students and staff.

similar to allergies: congestion, sneezing, sore throat, coughing, shortness of breath, skin irritation, headaches and fatigue, according to the California Department of Public Health.

Children and people with respiratory problems or who are allergic to mold can be more susceptible to those problems. Certain kinds of mold produce toxic compounds, which can further exacerbate these conditions.

But the Department of Public Health makes no distinction between toxic mold and more benign strains because they can all cause health problems. "It is not necessary to know if toxins are present to take appropriate action and remove molds," the department website states.

Ray said his district has lower attendance rates — and therefore lower rates of academic achievement — than Humboldt County or state averages. And he thinks that might be partly because of the district's widespread mold problems. Students might be staying home from school because they're sick, he said.

In addition to mold-free rooms, the repaired classrooms will have improved circulation, heating and air conditioning. The improvements may help prevent mold from growing in the future, but they'll also make for a more comfortable learning environment for kids, he said. "When it gets real hot, it's hard to sit in a classroom of 25 middle school kids who are sweaty and stinky."

With classrooms, cafeterias and gyms set to be repaired by the end of this year, Klamath-Trinity students could be in store for a healthier, happier and more productive school year.

Leaving Humboldt in the Dust

By Grant Scott-Goforth
newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

The sleepy, dusty desert west of Los Angeles may be looking like a threat to Humboldt County's marijuana industry. While the arid landscape may seem inhospitable to plants, two small cities in the region have been making strides to entice large-scale commercial marijuana farmers.

Land prices have skyrocketed in Desert Hot Springs and Adelanto since the struggling towns' governments legalized dispensaries and cultivation. That includes desert land without access to utilities. An LA Times article quotes a landowner as saying he was offered $1 million for 5 acres of undeveloped land, and a real estate agent who said he's been getting calls from all over the world from interested investors.

A Quartz article from April reports that permit fees from 27 recently approved medical marijuana operations have nearly matched the annual revenue from three state prisons that pay Adelanto taxes.

The scene rings familiar: remote, undisturbed, cheap properties attractive to marijuana growers who flock to the area from far off lands. But there's one major difference, and it's the one that local growers should be concerned about: The San Bernardino and Riverside county towns are right next door to California's largest marijuana market.

As many have pointed out, Humboldt County's remoteness was vastly appealing when marijuana was illegal and heavily stigmatized. Now, that 16-hour trip to a Los Angeles dispensary is looking like a liability, not an asset.

Of course, local industry types are working hard to capitalize on Humboldt's word-of-mouth marketing cachet, and to establish manufacturing centers that can add value to the raw local product. Will it be enough?

A ruling is expected soon that could affect a number of marijuana growers charged with federal crimes in the last several years.

The case, being presided over by the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, revolves around a congressional amendment that said "the DOJ could not use funding to ... prevent states that have legalized medical marijuana from implementing laws that permit its use, distribution and possession," according to the Associated Press. The amendment's sponsors say that it was intended to prevent federal prosecution of people who comply with state medical marijuana laws.

The U.S. Department of Justice — which has prosecuted defendants in the case — says the law "prevents prosecutors from trying to block state medical marijuana laws or charging state officials who implement them, yet permits U.S. attorneys to go after marijuana dispensaries and growers."

The decision could have wide-reaching impacts on marijuana growers and users in states — including California — that have medical marijuana programs and are considering recreational legalization.

Dying to become a weed reporter? The University of California Berkeley's online extension programming is offering a course called "Marijuana Journalism," featuring a seminar with the editor of the San Francisco Chronicle's online marijuana magazine Smell the Truth.

That venture, like the Denver Post's Cannabist, has proven to be a valuable journalistic enterprise as the great weed experiment of the 21st century gets underway, and it stands to reason that there will be plenty of opportunities for reporting on the burgeoning and shifting industry and the ramifications of relaxed pot laws around the U.S.

Of course, some might argue that getting a journalism degree at any college in the U.S. would get you the same results. But, like, who's got the time?

Low Dose Cannabis, Activity, & Well Being

As more patients across the country and globe are become familiar with the benefits of medical cannabis there is a larger community sharing their experiences around the use of this medicine. Through processes of safety and cannabinoid screening available at Humboldt Patient Resource Center (HPRC), patients are finally able to identify the cannabinoid ratios contained within their medical cannabis.

At HPRC patients can find selections of medical cannabis in a wide range of potencies (THC 5%-25% on average/ CBD 0.5%-16% CBD). Patients in severe pain or with extreme nausea comment on the benefits of high THC strains. Patients with arthritic pain and inflammation comment on a blend of THC and CBD being the most beneficial. Patients with social anxiety disorders or epilepsy comment on low THC high CBD being the most beneficial cannabinoid profile for their medical needs. Many of our collective's patients are sharing their positive experiences with the use of low dose THC (THC < 13%) and higher amounts of CBD (CBD > 2%) accompanied with some sort of physical activity.

In addition to low dose cannabis that may be ingested or vaporized, many patients are choosing non-psychoactive salves and topicals that can be applied to the skin or on painful joints without changing patients state of mind. These non smoking alternatives are picking up popularity with many of our local patients, allowing them to feel well enough to get back to their day to day activity.

Humboldt is a great area to get up and get out into nature and activity. As patients are finding the right combo of medicine for their ailments, many individuals comment that their physical well being is improving enough for them to take a walk again, practice yoga, go for a hike, or even be in a crowd in public. Lower dose THC strains are allowing patients to use medical cannabis for their ailments, but not overwhelming their sobriety and taking away from their state of mind. The best feedback from our patients is that their use of cannabis has helped them get back to being normal and productive life and they are avoiding adopting sedentary lifestyles.

Thirsty

It was with incredulity that Journal staffers gazed on a slender green can of caffeinated pop dressed up in gaudy packaging that arrived last week.

There, in front of us, was a piece of bona fide swag. A well-constructed box with a green ribbon pull, embossed lettering, and printed with a somewhat ominous countdown: 93 days, 15 hours, 47 minutes. It's unclear what was supposed to happen three months from the box's arrival; it's clearly a summer product, but summer was more like 60 days away when the box arrived, and how could the energy drink's marketers possibly know the minute it would show up at NCJ HQ?

And, as if the implication wasn't clear, the box included a business-card sized instruction manual: "Don't forget to give _____ a shout out for this sneak peek!" with a pair of suggested hashtags. Message received, _____.

Our minds raced. First we chuckled at the irony of a sugary (38g!), palpitation-inducing beverage in a single-use can arriving in a heavy, expensive-to-ship (carbon footprint!) package featuring plastic astroturf, foam and unrecyclable cardboard shortly after the Journal's green issue hit stands.

(The packaging is presumably intended to invoke the pleasures of laying on fresh cut summer grass but the box looks like a fucking grave, right? Is that some kind of Freudian marketing slip?)

Then we wondered, "Why us?" Sure, we get the occasional self-published book for review, and sources sometimes offer to buy us coffee. This reporter was handed a plastic logo-emblazoned Nalgene bottle at an event last week (it seemed rude to decline), and has felt guilty about it ever since, confessing the impropriety to a superior moments before this blog post went live.

But the Journal rarely receives expensive promo materials from multi-billion dollar soft drink corporations. Sure, the economy of scale allows their marketing machines to pump out fancy advertisements, but if a podunk weekly alternative rag like ours was getting one of these, hundreds — maybe thousands — of them must have been shipped to thirsty newsrooms across America.

Now, not to begrudge certain assistant managing editors at other newspapers (ahem) and others who might enjoy the flavor and kick of these sort of drinks, but our readers don't exactly seem like the macho soda demographic. So we can only assume the summer countdown swag project was a shotgun blast of gift boxes to every news outlet appearing on some mailing list.

We wrestled with whether to even write something about this, but it seemed so silly, and so ironic that we couldn't resist. Maybe later, if we're really bored, we'll mix it with weed vodka.

Legal weed redux: Lt. Gov. Gavin Newsom launched a campaign for legal recreational marijuana with support for an initiative that gathered enough votes to be on the November ballot. The initiative, which will need voter approval of more than 50 percent, would allow people 21-and-over to possess, transport, use and grow small amounts of marijuana. POSTED 05.04.16

Water Boys

Paddling prodigies Cory Soll and Nate Ferguson

By Susan Penn

getout@northcoastjournal.com

We launched from the beach in Trinidad in a motley assortment of watercrafts. Twelve-year-old Nate Ferguson was paddling his sit-on-top fishing kayak and 14-year-old Cory Soll was in a touring kayak. Leading the group was Jason Self, the boys' coach and surrogate uncle, who owns Kayak Trinidad. He paddled a white-water kayak and my friend Tim Clohessy and I rounded out the party in a tandem canoe.

Gentle swells raised and lowered our boats and, while we watched for whales, Cory and Nate played. Cory did an easy roll, then nudged his boat into Nate's, laughingly saying, "I wonder if Nate wants to be pushed off his boat." Soon they were both in the water, then clamboring back onto and into their boats, calling for whales. Looking at them, you might not guess they're sponsored by a number of national sporting equipment companies.

Kayaking is relatively new to both boys, and while there's a lot of laughter, they take it seriously, practicing up to four days a week before a competition. Both of them initially got interested in kayaks as a way to get to their favorite fishing spots. Then one day last October, Cory got a taste of kayak surfing when high winds quashed a fishing trip he and Jason had planned. Since they were already on the water, Self suggested they play in the waves. By the time they got off the water, Cory was hooked.

Self had been coaching Cory in kayak angling, then a neighbor gave the boy a 20-year-old Perception Whiplash kayak and the focus of the coaching sessions shifted to surfing. "Within two months, Cory was a better kayaker than I am," says Self. Cory denies this, but does acknowledge his skill. In March he took part in the Santa Cruz Paddlefest, surfing both a kayak and a SUP (stand up paddle board), placing third with his kayak in his first heat. Both the boys' budding skills have earned sponsorships from several companies, including Werner Paddles, Stohlquist Waterwear, Pyranha Kayaks and Feel Free Kayaks, not to mention Mad River Tackle and, of course, Self's own Kayak Trinidad.

We all headed for Trinidad Head, and while Tim and I gave the big rock a respectful berth, Nate, Cory and Self nudged their boats in close where they found a place to play in the waves sloshing off the big rock. I was amazed at their skill, agility and boldness.

Cory said he was 7 when he fell in love with surfing. That year his parents volunteered for Outward Bound in Costa Rica and while they worked, he and his older brother "spent our time surfing and boogie boarding." Nate's father introduced him to surfing at the age of 3 by letting him ride on the front of his long board. Nate caught his first solo wave at 4, and has no plans to stop.

The conversation drifted to the previous weekend's abalone expedition. Nate had gone to Mendocino with family friends to dive for abalone and collected his limit. I was surprised when Nate and Cory told me they hope to get out to a local abalone spot soon. "They're harder to find here and harder to get, so when you do get them, they're a lot bigger than the ones in Mendocino," Nate says.

The boys' parents do not share their sons' passion for fishing, but support them in their efforts. Nate has spent many days fishing off the Trinidad pier, getting to know charter, commercial and recreational fishermen in the process. This has led to opportunities to help on boats, and he quickly picked up skills. When Cory expressed an interest in fishing, his father, who knew Nate's parents, introduced the boys and a new friendship was born.

The boys have also dipped their toes into the commercial aspect of fishing. Cory sometimes works as a deckhand on the Jumping Jack during the summer and Nate turned his skill at cleaning fish into a summer job. Last summer, when Nate was saving for a sit-on-top kayak for fishing, the young entrepreneur set up a fish filleting station to serve sport fishermen. Self, who was working for Pacific Outfitters, was impressed by the 11-year-old boy working diligently on the beach every day. When Pacific Outfitters hosted the annual Rockfish Wars in 2015, Self invited Nate to fish with the team. He also introduced Nate to the rep for Ocean Kayak, who immediately agreed to sponsor the young sportsman. Nate's quest for a sit-on-top fishing kayak was answered.

Summer is coming and school will be out. If you're already paddle-ready, you'll likely see these guys on the water. If you're interested in learning, check out the Sports, Athletics and Adventure section on page 27 for places to pick up skills and hit the surf. ●

Twirling Toward Freedom

Gina Tuzzi and friends at the Sanctuary

By Gabrielle Gopinath

artbeat@northcoastjournal.com

My artist's statement is a mixtape," Gina Tuzzi said. The paintings in her show Dance Hall Days at the Sanctuary this month are Valentines to the music that defined her personal teenage idyll. The works' sleek, patterned surfaces make them look contemporary; gyrating silhouettes from the iPod commercials of the 2000s are an unavoidable reference point. But this hyper-contemporary appearance belies the series' foundation in nostalgia for the dance parties, fashions, classic cars and especially the music of the artist's youth.

The exhibition is split between acrylic paintings on paper and painted plywood silhouettes. Tuzzi said she wanted these works to embody a "dance hall vernacular" feel. So dancers' bodies emit auratic clouds in shades like aquamarine, lilac and fuchsia. Madly grooving bodies catch the spirit, and blossoms of color spiral in their wake. Strobe lighting multiplies every form, spinning off halos and afterimages. Dancers' bodies remain devoid of detail, so you can project any identity you want onto their forms. Mirror balls, rainbows, streamers, and precision drawings of objects like lawn chairs and tropical flowers complete the party décor.

At a distance Tuzzi's figures look as crisp as the synthetic sound of a gated snare. Up close, it's clear nothing has been rendered in a rote or mechanical way. Each of the concentric lines of the colorful auras blooming from dancers' forms is painted freehand. Slight irregularities in each repeated form lend the paintings a kinetic quality, making them appear to shimmy both on and off the wall.

Tuzzi grew up on the Central Coast, in Santa Cruz. "When I was 16, in the mid-1990s, I was gifted a box of Desmond Decker cassettes. Early rock steady and reggae sounds — the origins of ska. And those cassettes changed my life. Learning about vintage reggae at a young age was just a beginning; it somehow turned me on to the idea that there was this world of other music, the music of the past," she said. "And at the same time I had my very first car, a 1965 Ford Falcon Futura. All I wanted to do was cruise around and listen to those cassettes, and of course at the time I had no idea that 1995 was going to be this important touchstone moment for me, in retrospect."

As Tuzzi tells it, Desmond Decker became a gateway drug of sorts, leading to other groove enthusiasms, with Giorgio Moroder's louche disco exerting an especially strong influence.

Tuzzi said she started sneaking into dance parties at Santa Cruz's Coconut Grove ballroom at a tender age. "The club was right on the beach. The DJ would be playing everything from disco to local hip-hop in this beautiful space, and my girlfriends and I would sneak in and go dance to disco. To this day, whenever I smell Malibu rum, it takes me back."

You could say these artworks are driven by nostalgia squared. In other words, the soundtrack to this idyll was already vintage when Tuzzi experienced it the first time around. "It's funny — at the age of 16 I was spending all my time cruising in this vintage car, listening to records made like 40 years ago." Tuzzi's relationship to history is complex in a way that will feel familiar to viewers who came of age in the 1990s, arguably the first decade in which pastiche and remix began to dominate youth culture.

Tuzzi now divides her time between Arcata and Oakland, and she still thinks of the dance floor as a place of refuge. "When you're on the dance floor, you're safe, you're in the moment. Your mind can exit the space that's defined by daily pressures, responsibilities, problems. You can just say, 'Fuck it — I'm gonna dance.'"

She wanted these paintings to conjure the kinesthetic experience of moving to music, so it was important to make them "visually enticing" in ways that would recall the maximalist interiors of clubs like the Coconut Grove. Strobe effects, candy colors, and vibrant patterning evoke the "transcendent" state familiar to clubgoers of every age — that state in which it's hard to answer William Butler Yeats' question, "How can we know the dancer from the dance?"

Tuzzi teaches painting at Humboldt State University, and this exhibition also features a selection of works by her advanced painting students, Rebecca Baldwin, Alyssa Newton, Kasey Haas, Victor Feyling, Shane Donaldson, Victor Batz, Danielle Carlson, Gabrielle Castro, Angie Allen and Grace Franchini. She allows that there's going to be "a lot of visual competition in the (Sanctuary) space," but "the exhibition space feels really full of life. There's a sense of vibrant community, and because the space was built to be a church it is designed to amplify sound. It's the perfect church for these works. "

So naturally the exhibition opening is going to double as dance party. Sound will be provided by the Arcata-based DJ Jaymorg, who collaborated with Tuzzi to curate a playlist of cuts scientifically proven to bring the funk. "Jaymorg has this impeccable vinyl collection and he loves the same 1970s funk that I do. So I sent him links to the music that's on heavy rotation in my studio, and he came up with a setlist — that's his contribution to the project."

That brings us back to Tuzzi's manifesto, available at the opening in the form of free CDs. "They feature my all-time favorite dance tracks," Tuzzi explained, "at least, the ones that I could hunt down. Because there are so many great cuts that never made it onto CD, or mp3 ... or even cassette, for that matter." Among the tracks are "Not Just Knee Deep"

by George Clinton and Parliament, "It Mek" by Desmond Decker, "Jungle Fever" by Stevie Wonder and "I Feel Love" by Donna Summer.

Experience the manifesto in its entirety at the opening for Dance Hall Days at the Sanctuary on Friday, May 13, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Black Five

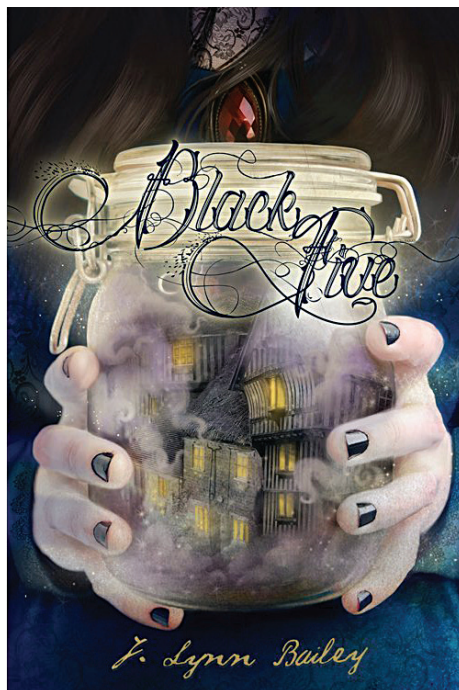

Written by
J. Lynn Bailey

By JoAnn Bauer
inreview@northcoastjournal.com

Avid readers of teen fantasy fiction will find much that's familiar in Black Five: vampires, werewolves, witches and the odd fairy and dragon. However, local author J. Lynn Bailey has recast these creatures as denizens of a richly imagined realm called Nighmerianotte. This world lies in another dimension that roughly overlaps the U.S., Europe and Africa. Passage between our world and that of the Nighmerians is through five portals scattered across this vast area, one of which is in Mason, a small coastal town in Northern California.

It is in Mason that we meet our heroine, Penelope Jackson. Penn is in her senior year of high school and somewhat overwhelmed by AP classes, the upcoming Big Game and raging hormones that have turned her friendship with Jesse into an awkward and confusing crush. On top of all this, Penn is keeping a secret.

Shortly before her 18th birthday, Penn discovers that her friends and family have been keeping secrets, too, all revolving around her destiny as the Sanguine, the Black Five — that is, the only one who can save Nighmerianotte from the tyranny of the Black Blood known as Vacavious. The protection spell that has kept Penn's existence hidden from her enemies will end on her next birthday, when she must be ready both physically and mentally to fight for her life and her true home in the other realm.

Engaging characters, an intriguing plot and an earthly setting that feels a lot like Ferndale make this a fun book to read. There are also some squeamish moments, especially when an army of morterros, who function as zombies, attack Penn and her cohorts on Main Street.

Aprilyne Pike has given us fairies in Orick in her series, beginning with Wings, and now the Eel River Valley has its own brush with the world of magic from J. Lynn Bailey. Who knew our community would be at the center of a struggle not only to restore the Kingdom of Nighmerianotte, but to prevent Vacavious' broader plan to bring earth to its knees?

This book should come with a warning: Everything is still unsettled on the last page and readers will have to wait until the next installment of the Black Five Chronicles is released. The good news is that it is already at the publisher and should be available soon. Bailey has a series of four titles planned, so the pleasure of spending time in this fantasy world will continue for years to come. ●

Miniature cakes rated by a miniature critic

tabletalk@northcoastjournal.com

The cupcake — as a trend, as a gourmet obsession and as a boutique industry unto itself — is over. It's been given unnatural longevity here behind the Redwood Curtain, but elsewhere in the U.S., the fast-zombie craze died down in the aughts, when Sarah Jessica Parker teetered off the set of Sex and the City with the last açai-Champagne cupcake from the craft services table. Such is the life cycle of a food boom. Out, out, brief birthday candle!

This is not all bad. It means the fair-weather fans and fly-by-night bakers have gone on to the next big thing. (Beignets? It might be beignets.) In fact, if a baker wants to stay in the game, he or she will need to please a less fickle clientele, the market for which the cupcake was created: 7-year-olds. To test cupcakes around the county, we brought in an expert from the key demographic, a 7-year-old we'll call "A," who may or may not be my daughter. I chauffeured, observed and recorded as she tasted our county's favorites, rating them on a scale of 1 to 10.

Brio Café (791 G St., Arcata)

The glass case up front fascinates like a pastry aquarium. “A” chose a ginger spice cupcake with cream cheese frosting and a chocolate cupcake with a baseball-sized dollop of peanut butter frosting ($3.85). Concerned about their enormity, she licked the snowdrift of cream cheese frosting. “I think this one’s good if you really want something creamy ... or break-fast,” she said, working down to the moist spice cake. The peanut butter frosting had a little texture from the nut garnish and the peanut butter whipped into it. She deemed the flavor “distracting,” leading me to question genetics, and then focused on the dense, dark cake, which she loved. Still, she found them too big, saying, “there’s no way you can fit that whole thing in your mouth and taste all the flavors.” She gave it an 8 and I happily ate her scraps.

Ramones Bakery & Café (747 13th St., Arcata)

Excited about the miniature option, “A” ordered a mushroom-sized chocolate cupcake with white buttercream and coconut ($1.30). The button of devil’s food cake on her plate inspired genuine glee but she was unsure of the frosting as a match. The unsweetened coconut had a slight aftertaste and the buttercream was firm as a chilled pat of butter, taking it down to a 7.5. The standard-size red velvet with soft cream cheese frosting fared better ($2.35). She liked “how they crumbled the cake on the top so you can taste it.” The cake was a little firm for me, but she was sold. The tang of cream cheese won her over, though she would have liked it a little sweeter. The same frosting crowned the carrot cupcake, which was moist and dotted with raisins and shredded carrot ($2.35). Both cupcakes were “a pretty good amount for breakfast, lunch or maybe dessert,” she observed, adding that they were easier to bite. They each earned a 9.

North Coast Co-op Bakery (811 I St., Arcata)

As “A” climbed onto her chair, I outlined gluten-free and vegan restrictions and their respective challenges for the baker so she could evaluate those before us ($2.25). She dipped a pinky in the gluten-free chocolate cupcake’s fudgy frosting and was pleased. “I like the frosting.

Because the cake is sweet, it’s a little bitter so it’s good together.” The cake itself, not so much. “It feels like sand.” The vegan version vexed her, too, with its dense, “doughy” cake and hardened frosting. She tapped the piped wave of butterless cream. “I can crack it, but why?” Hearing that some people can’t or don’t eat flour or butter, she grew somber. Pity and respect for self-sacrificing animal lovers moved her to handicap the gluten-free with a 7.5 and the vegan at a 7.

Humboldt Sweets (614 Main St., Ferndale)

“A” liked the cottage feel of the shop but was skeptical of the cupcakes in the case. She begged to order a pecan roll instead. “This is work,” I explained, picking up our chocolate cupcake with vanilla buttercream, coconut and caramel ($2). She loved the condensed milk flavor of the caramel and dubbed the coconut “awesome.” But the problem was one of engineering, not taste: The cake was too delicate to support the heavy dollop of frosting and it tipped over and broke as she tried to peel the paper off. “They need to get some more cake in there. No one wants frosting in a cup.” She paused to consider the gravity of her words before settling on a draconian 5.5 rating.

Cherry Blossom Bakery (2940 E St., Eureka)

The look of the small, colorful lemon poppyseed, confetti-sprinkled chocolate and red velvet cakes ($1.25) inspired giddy excitement but the texture didn’t live up. The crispy seeds, lemon flavor and frosting were lovely, but the cake by itself was “a little dry,” she noted, giving it a 7. She found the milk chocolate frosting birthday-cake worthy and would have scored it a 9 on its own, but the parched cake took it down to a 7. The red velvet, which lacked the traditional cocoa flavor, fared worse despite her favorite cream cheese frosting and a chocolate heart, coming in at a crumbly 6.

Corner Café and Bake Shop (502 Henderson St., Eureka)

At the bakery formerly known as Vellutini, “A” took bites of the well-proportioned vanilla and chocolate cupcakes — teacup-size is evidently the ideal — swirled with pastel green frosting and topped with a plastic shamrock ring for St. Patrick’s Day ($1 each). She squinted under her ballcap and said she liked the soft, airy vanilla cake and gave kudos for the color, sprinkles and bonus ring. However, she found the slightly gritty shortening frosting overwhelming. “Don’t you think it’s a little too much sugar?” she asked. I squinted back at her. “I like the chocolate cake to be more chocolatey,” she said, adding, “I’d be fine with them if they were for my birthday.” She gave the pair a solid 8.

Toni’s 24-Hour Restaurant (1901 Heindon Road, Arcata)

“A” raised a skeptical eyebrow in the shadow of the chocolate behemoth impaled with a toothpick and wrapped in plastic ($3.49). The first nibble did not bode well as she remarked that the frosting was “a teeny bit salty ... like too much butter on a piece of toast.” But a full bite of the fluffy, glossy-crumbed devil’s food cake with the fudgy frosting turned everything around. She declared it “yummy” before silently taking down the rest of it and scraping at the crumbs on the wrapper with her fingers. That’s how you quiet a child and earn a 9.5.

Mia Bella Cupcakes (1041 H St., Arcata)

The critic squealed at the sight of the pink and white cupcake shrine and its matching kiddie table. We ordered a vanilla raspberry-filled ($2.75) and a chocolate-chocolate chip ($2.85). Both came in at the proper size, bite-able with a few licks off the top — perfect “if you just want a little something sweet in the morning.” (What does my husband feed her when I’m not around?) She admired the pureed raspberry filling’s freshness and the extra whipping that yielded a soft, airy, classic buttercream, saying it reminded her of eating berries and milk. Her only criticism was that the cake needed a little more vanilla, since she was “tasting a lot of wheat.” The milk chocolate frosting drew a deep hum of appreciation for its texture and “grandma” taste, and she marveled at the even distribution of chips in the tender cake. Both cupcakes racked up a 9.5 to tie with Toni’s for the top spot.

And so we have our frosted champions in the unlikely tie between a truck stop and a boutique bakery. Which speaks to the sweet conundrum of the cupcake — at once the homey treat smeared around a child’s mouth and the fanciest thing at the tea party — all-ages and, thankfully, trend-proof.

LET'S GROW GREENER PLANTING TIPS:

1. Temperatures are warm enough to plant most flowers and vegetables without protection. It's still a little chilly early in the month for cucumbers, tomatoes, peppers and squash. Keep some 'Seed Guard' cloth on hand to protect the tender plants.
2. Prune your spring blooming shrubs now. You can dead head the spent flowers. You can also feed your plantings now. Organic, acidic fertilizers for rhododendrons, azaleas and camellias and all purpose fertilizers for the rest of the plants.
3. Drip irrigation systems put water where you need it and will save you money. Mulches of fine fir bark, shredded bark, compost or wood chips will also cut back on soil water loss. A 3-4" layer will hold the moisture for a couple of months in some soils. Most established trees and shrubs can get by with no summer watering.
4. Feed any citrus trees that are in the ground or pots. They need regular applications of fertilizer and iron to keep healthy and productive. We recommend G&B Fruit and Citrus Fertilizer with an additional application of iron. Container grown plants need to be fed more often than those in the ground.
5. Start thinning developing fruit on your fruit trees. Thin small stone fruits (apricots and plums) to one fruit every 2-4 inches. Larger stone fruits (peaches and nectarines) should be thinned to one every 4-5 inches. Apples and pears should be thinned to one per cluster and then then 6-8 inches apart. Leave the largest fruit out each cluster.

Flights of Angels and Cries of Doves

By Andy Powell

thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

I originally hesitated to jump on the bandwagon of grieving for the former artist known as Prince, not because he wasn't deserving, but because the outpouring was near universal and ubiquitous. Now, a few weeks since his passing, I feel comfortable reflecting on our loss, and the temporal nature of other artists and entertainers.

Like me, you may not be super familiar with Prince's body of work. Sure, I know the hits, and I was aware of his balls-to-the-wall fashion proclivities, but a scholar of his sound I am not. With that said, I have come to appreciate him and his work immensely. It was only a few years ago I learned what a phenomenal guitarist he was (for proof just look up him jamming on "While My Guitar Gently Weeps" with Tom Petty and Jeff Lynne et. al. Unbelievable).

All that aside, what I always find terribly interesting when we lose an immense talent is how personal it all feels, all without ever having actually met the person. Freddie Mercury: I never met him. Never saw him in concert with Queen, but I truly miss the guy. It sounds weird until we really think about it. The artists who can effectively share themselves, or share something real through their music, may connect more with us than someone we've actually known and talked to in our daily lives. The sweet consolation in all of this is that even though we will eventually lose all the artists we hold dear, their music is eternal, and that's no small thing. So Prince may be gone, but we'll forever have the chance to know him better through his songs. So good night, sweet Prince, and may flights of angels sing thee to thy rest.

Thursday

The Kinetic Sculpture Race is almost upon us, and low-end-fanatic Dan Davis tells me that Richard's Goat Tavern and Tea Room (or is it the Miniplex?) hosts a benefit for the Kinetic Video Team at 7 p.m. For only a $5 donation you can hear: The heavy metal sounds of War Möth, an "all girl elastic waist comfort band" a.k.a. Blood Gnome, Gobi Blank's "local ethereal chance loop vocal pop," and some "new age noise" from Cybernator 2.

With a less wordy description, catch local guitarist Piet Dalmolen strummin', soloin' and loopin' it up at Redwood Curtain Brewing Company for free at 8 p.m.

Friday

If punk and endless DIY pride are your thing, the Arcata Vet's Hall is the place to be. An all-ages show starting around 7:30 p.m. hosts Jeff Rosentock (DIY from NYC), Upset (DIY from L.A.), Soarb (DIY from the Bay) and Dosidicus (DIY from Arcata). $10 for this showcase and beer will be available for those 21+.

I'm guessing the members of Good Company do it themselves, too, and they'll be doing that at Cafe Mokka for free at 8 p.m. — also all ages.

Local Americana band Kingfoot returns to the Logger Bar with special guest (and DIYer) Ryan Bisio. A free show here, and starting around 9 p.m. My thanks to the Logger Bar for still talking to me after screwing up some info in last week's column. All mistakes, I do myself.

Saturday

Local do-it-yourselfers (okay, you get the point right?) Honky Tonk Detours stop by their favorite — my guess — venue so catch 'em at Mad River Brewery for free at 6 p.m.

Local musician in residence at the Westhaven Center for the Arts Josephine Johnson will be singing you some songs about Humboldt County barns tonight. No joke. "I recently completed a song about the Graham-Long Dairy Barn in Freshwater," she says. "The discovery process was a fascinating journey into local agricultural, economic and cultural history." Doing more homework than most songwriters it seems, you can hear Josephine — and learn more about local barns — at the above-mentioned center for the arts located in Westhaven at 7 p.m. for free.

Sow your Wild Otis (sounded funny in my head) at the "world famous" Logger Bar at 9 p.m. This group of all-around nice rockers won't even be asking a cover charge from you, so feel free to rock out and leave a tip.

Ian — the beard and soul of the Alibi — tells me that some "death psych" from Albuquerque will be in town in the form of Holy Glories. Joining them at the Alibi around 11 p.m. will be local garage rockers The Sturgeons all for only $5.

Sunday

The quote of the week comes to us courtesy of Arcata Playhouse owner David Ferney, who mentions that Jeffrey Foucault "returns with his brooding, sexy Marlboro man magic." As an aside, when the NCJ finally fires me, I recommend they immediately hire Ferney. Anyway, touring in support of his 10th record, Salt As Wolves, Whitewater-Wisconsinite Foucault hits up the Arcata Playhouse at 8 p.m. A songwriter in the tradition (I'm told) of American country-folk troubadours like John Prine, Greg Brown and Townes Van Zandt, and Canuck Neil Young, Mr. Foucault (I'm also told) still uses a typewriter to craft his lyrics. Nothing against him — or you hipsters who find that exciting — but I couldn't care any less whether he uses a Underwood or Crayola. But the guy can write, so I guess the ends justify the unnecessarily specific means. Opening this $18 show will be Lauren Sargent, who may or may not craft her lyrics on a word processor.

Not too far away at Richard's Goat Miniplex (in the Tavern) there will be some punk — post-pop along with garage — at 8:30 p.m. The Thermals ("Sub Pop, Kill Rock Stars, and currently Saddle Creek Records") have a new record out, so expect some songs from We Disappear. Currently on the Thermals' former label, Kill Rock Stars, are Summer Cannibals, who also hail from Portland and will be rounding out this bill. I'm currently unclear what former labels the Cannibals have been on, so it's on you to find out. $10 gets you in the door.

Hi-diddle-dee-dem, it's an actors' life for them. See what the youth from Northcoast Preparatory and Performing Arts Academy do with the tale of a puppet that longs to become a real boy when they present Le Avventure di Pinocchio at Gist Hall Theatre May 19-21 at 7 p.m. with an additional matinee on Saturday, May 21 at 2 p.m. ($10, $7).

Get down and dirty at the KMUD Block Party this Saturday, May 14 from noon to midnight (free). The long-standing SoHum tradition features music all day/night, vendors, food and drink, three (!) swimming pools to keep the young'uns happy and fun activities for the whole family.

Get on Your Bikes and Ride

May is National Bike Month and our bike-friendly area has plenty of activities planned to encourage people to tool around on two instead of four wheels.

This week, Siren's Song Tavern is showing short films at the all-ages Humboldt Bike Shorts Film Night on Thursday, May 12 at 7 p.m. (free). Fortuna's Sport & Cycle is having a family bike clinic on Saturday, May 14 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. (free). Kids can have their helmets and bikes safety-checked and tuned-up at the Kids' Bike Rodeos at Blue Lake Family Resource Center on May 14 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Loleta Elementary School on May 14 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

SCRAP Humboldt is having a "trick-out your" Bike Party on May 14 at 3 p.m. ($5). The Humboldt Hardcourt Bike Polo Demo happens Sunday, May 15 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Manila Bay Community Park (TBA), and the Eureka Co-op's energizer station is open from 7 to 9 a.m. on Bike to Work Day Eureka happening Wednesday, May 18. Cyclists can meet their bike brethren at the rally the same day at noon at the Old Town Gazebo (free).

There's plenty more two-wheeling fun happening this month. For a complete list of Bike Month events, visit www.humbike.org.

Grease

The One That We Want

"Summer lovin' had me a blast ..."

If you're gearing up right now to belt out the next line to "Summer Nights," the infectious he-said-she-said account of high school romance from Grease, you're not alone and you're in for a treat. The 1978 movie adaptation of the musical about a group of high schoolers in the 1950s is playing Friday, May 13 at 8 p.m. the Arcata Theatre Lounge ($5).

Those of us who know every word to every song are making plans to pack the ATL on Friday and bust out some Hopelessly Devoted To You. Imagine it: a giant-screen, electrifying night of movie Karaoke. We got chills. (You know what they're doin'.)

The love story featuring wholesome exchange student Sandy Olsson (Olivia Newton-John) and good-hearted greaser Dannny Zuko (John Travolta) was a smash. It broke box-office records, charted four Billboard No. 1 hits and remains one of the top-selling soundtracks of all time. Thanks in large part to Travolta and Newton-John's on-screen chemistry and iconic performances by Stockard Channing, Didi Conn, Jeff Conway and seasoned actors Sid Caesar, Joan Blondell and Eve Arden.

Girls, grab your Pink Ladies jackets, and bros, shine your T-Birds. It's gonna be a night you won't forget.

Tell us about it, stud.

O Captain! My Captain!

Civil War's superpower politics

By John J. Bennett

filmland@northcoastjournal.com

Reviews

CAPTAIN AMERICA: CIVIL WAR. I've made no secret of my base-level disinterest in the Marvel Cinematic Universe nor my growing concern that said universe, in its ever-widening, sun-blotting expansion, will soon consume all available funding and creative energy available in mainstream movie-making, to the exclusion of any content non-Marvel. Overstrong? Maybe. Paranoid and borderline delusional? Certainly. But looking back over the cinematic landscape of the last decade, these movies are beyond-dominant features, landmarks on a geological scale. Some of them are undeniably fun and, as a rule, they share a formidable level of detail and polish, intimidatingly A-list casts and superlative effects and stunt work, as Civil War does. They also reek of self-importance and false gravity, both crippling Achilles' heels for movies born of the funny papers.

Captain America: The First Avenger (2011) is, in a way, the best and worst example of this trend. It showed tremendous potential, with its retro flavor and grab-bag of throw-back comic book tropes. But it forgot to have fun with those elements, instead corrupting them with an awkward forced seriousness and dismissal of its supporting characters. As we've since learned, though, that movie was really just a springboard to the Avengers franchise. It introduced us to Cap (Chris Evans) and got the billion-dollar ball rolling, which is all that matters.

So now we arrive at the third entry in a Captain America trilogy. (Where one draws the line between a Captain America movie and an Iron Man movie and an Avengers movie eludes me.) Having destroyed most of an Eastern European capital in defeating Ultron, some of the Avengers are taking a well-earned breather, hopefully thinking about what they've done. Thor and Bruce Banner are nowhere to be seen. Clint Barton/Hawkeye (Jeremy Renner) is playing at being domesticated. Tony Stark/Iron Man (Robert Downey Jr.) is dialing back his arms manufacturing, focusing instead on funding student research grants and attempting to process his grief at the decades-ago loss of his parents.

That leaves the lion's share of the global policing to Steve Rogers/Captain America (Chris Evans) and a capable B-team, that in the opening is tracking a robbery crew in Lagos, Nigeria. Our heroes manage to capture their quarry before they can get away with a super-bug from an infectious disease laboratory, but it comes at a significant cost. The collateral damage destroys an apartment block, killing dozens of innocents.

Meanwhile, after presenting a sizable financial gift at M.I.T, Stark is confronted by a woman whose son died as a result of the Avengers' battle with Ultron in Sokovia. This revelation brings Stark's burden of grief to critical mass, so when the Avengers are presented with a U.N. accord sanctioning them and dramatically limiting their autonomy, he's all in. This puts him at loggerheads with Rogers, who bristles at what he perceives as fascist dictates. And so begins the advertised conflict, with the rest of the Avengers forced to choose allegiances in the face of yet another apocalyptic threat.

As with Captain America: The Winter Soldier (2014), Joe and Anthony Russo direct here with a surprisingly pleasant balance of action and political commentary. A conversation about the repercussions of superhero actions in context is long overdue, and the Russos handle it gracefully, subtly couching it in terms of real-world geo-politics, without proselytizing. The nuance of a meditation on power and restraint is tempered, of course, by a great number of explosions and a constantly growing roster of super people, but its mere presence somehow feels like progress. As does the arc of the Captain America trilogy: What started as the weakest aspect of the Avengers juggernaut has grown into its most sophisticated, contemplative one. Civil War is still awfully long, perhaps over-burdened with characters and plot points and lighter on humor than I'd like, but these are all trademarks of Marvel that I've come to accept. As much as I'd like to see some of the vast fortune being spent on these movies redistributed, I can at least take some solace in the fact that good work is being done. This is a well-made, satisfying action movie, a superior entry in the Marvel canon and a promising start for some potentially exciting new characters. PG13. 147M. BROADWAY, FORTUNA, MILL CREEK.

NOTICE INVITING BIDS

1. Notice is hereby given that the Governing Board of the Jacoby Creek School District ("District"), of the County of Humboldt, State of California, will receive sealed bids for the FROG and Portable Buildings Fiber Optic Wiring Project ("Project") up to, but not later than, Tuesday, 3:00 pm., on May 31, 2016, and will thereafter publicly open and read aloud the bids. All bids shall be received at the office of the Jacoby Creek School District, California.
2. Each bid shall be completed on the Bid Proposal Form included in the Contract Documents, and must conform and be fully responsive to this invitation, the plans and specifications and all other Contract Documents. Copies of the Contract Documents are available for examination at the office of the Jacoby Creek School District, County of Humboldt, California, and may be obtained by licensed contractors.
3. Each bid shall be accompanied by cash, a cashier's or certified check, or a bidder's bond executed by a surety licensed to do business in the State of California as a surety, made payable to the District, in an amount not less than ten percent (10%) of the maximum amount of the bid. The check or bid bond shall be given as a guarantee that the bidder to whom the contract is awarded will execute the Contract Documents and will provide the required payment and performance bonds and insurance certificates within ten (10) days after the notification of the award of the Contract.
4. The successful bidder shall comply with the provisions of the Labor Code pertaining to payment of the generally prevailing rate of wages and apprenticeships or other training programs. The Department of Industrial Relations has made available the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the work is to be performed for each craft, classification or type of worker needed to execute the Contract, including employer payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation, apprenticeship and similar purposes. Copies of these prevailing rates are available to any interested party upon request and are online at <http://www.dir.ca.gov/DLSR>. The Contractor and all Subcontractors shall pay not less than the specified rates to all workers employed by them in the execution of the Contract. It is the Contractor's responsibility to determine any rate change.
5. The schedule of per diem wages is based upon a working day of eight hours. The rate for holiday and overtime work shall be at least time and one half.
6. The substitution of appropriate securities in lieu of retention amounts from progress payments in accordance with Public Contract Code §22300 is permitted.
7. Pursuant to Public Contract Code §4104, each bid shall include the name and location of the place of business of each subcontractor who shall perform work or service or fabricate or install work for the contractor in excess of one-half of one percent (1/2 of 1%) of the bid price. The bid shall describe the type of the work to be performed by each listed subcontractor.
9. Minority, women, and disabled veteran contractors are encouraged to submit bids. This bid is not subject to Disabled Veteran Business Enterprise requirements.
10. The project is subject to compliance monitoring and enforcement by the California Department of Industrial Relations. In accordance with SB 854, all bidders, contractors and subcontractors working at the site shall be duly registered with the Department of Industrial Relations at time of bid opening and at all relevant times. Proof of registration shall be provided as to all such contractors prior to the commencement of any work.
11. Each bidder shall possess at the time the bid is awarded the following classification(s) of California State Contractor's license: C-7-Low Voltage Systems.
12. (Optional) The Governing Board has found that the Project is substantially complex and therefore requires a retention amount of ____%.
13. x Bidders' Conference. A mandatory bidders' conference will be held at Jacoby Creek School District on Tuesday, May 24, 2016 at 9:00 am. for the purpose of acquainting all prospective bidders with the Contract Documents and the Project site. Failure to attend the conference may result in the disqualification of the bid of the non-attending bidder.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF NADINE A. CHRISTIAN CASE NO. PR160144

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, NADINE A. CHRISTIAN A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, CRAIG HANNA In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that CRAIG HANNA be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on June 16, 2016 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 8. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

TS# 16-2255 NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED: 5/19/04. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

A public auction sale to the highest bidder for cash, cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, or savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state will be held by the duly appointed trustee, as shown below, all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by the trustee in the hereinafter described property under and pursuant to a Deed of Trust described below. The sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the property address or other common designation, if any shown herein. Trustor: Yang Quest, LLC, a South Carolina Limited Liability Company Duly Appointed Trustee: Foreclosure Specialists LLC Recorded 6/8/04 as Instrument No. 2004-19047-4 of Official Records in the office of the Recorder of Humboldt County, California, Date of Sale: Thursday, June 2, 2016 at 10:30 A.M. Place of Sale: On the steps to the front entrance to the County Courthouse, 825 5th Street, Eureka, CA 95501 The common designation of the property is purported to be: Vacant Land known as Ill Wave Drive, Shelter Cove, CA. Directions to the property may be obtained pursuant to a written request submitted to the Beneficiary, Jean L. Lane, Trustee, within 10 days from the first publication of this notice at 1388 Court St., Suite C, Redding, CA 96001 Lot 19, in Block 116, of Tract No. 42, Shelter Cove Subdivision as per Map recorded in Book 14, Pages 73 to 138 inclusive of Maps, in the Office of the County Recorder of said County, as amended by the Amending Map recorded in Book 15, Pages 64 to 116 inclusive, of Maps, In the Office of the County Recorder of said County. EXCEPTING therefrom all the water and water rights in, under or flowing over said property or appurtenant thereto, and

50% of all oil, gas and other mineral and hydrocarbon substances below a plane of 500 feet beneath the surface thereof, but without the right of surface entry, all as reserved by the Bank of California, National Association, a national banking association, in Deed recorded March 31, 1975, Book 1281 of Official Records, Page 307, under Recorder's Serial No. 5030, Humboldt County Records. APN: 109-361-043 Estimated opening bid: $154,681.77 Beneficiary may elect to open bidding at a lesser amount. The total amount secured by said instrument as of the time of initial publication of this notice is stated above, which includes the total amount of the unpaid balance (including accrued and unpaid interest) and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of initial publication of this notice. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call the trustee's information line at 530-246-2727 or visit this Internet Web site: calforeclosures.biz, using the file number assigned to this case: TS #16-2255. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Date: 5/2/16 Foreclosure Specialists LLC
